Spring sun may brown evergreens

When it no longer has beneficial maintenance on Mother Earth in the spring, the needle is usually reduced to all.

Not as with evergreen trees. Bright sun in March and April can cause injury to the temperatures within the needles, precipitating "winter" while the "young" branches, a surprising aspect of evergreen trees.

If the moisture content of the needles is reduced to a certain level, the leaves are unable to recover. The resulting "wintering" begins at the top of the needles and progresses toward the base.

This drying process seldom causes permanent injury, says E. C. Roy of the Canadian department of Agriculture's Saskatchewan Research Station. The buds, which are in the protective scales, are usually able to withstand the drying action of the sun.

When the growing season arrives, they open up and give way to new green shoots and foliage which quickly take the detailed color of the old.

Small trees can be protected by spraying them with snow.

Overwatering in the fall increases the water content of the whole tree before winter begins, reducing the risk of winter damage.

How To Hold

FALSE TEETH

More firmly in place

There are two main reasons why false teeth do not stay in place. One is the way they are made. The other is the way they are worn. The first reason is the way they are made. The second reason is the way they are worn.

JOY OF READING

Christmas are not reading enough books according to the results of a survey of 100 women magazine fans in April, they found.

All those accustomed to using reading for buying themselves in books, have found that the winter is not for them.

The survey shows that women are better than men. However, it states that only 36 percent of all adult Canadians are reading books today compared with 40 percent in 1939.

Children's books and literary fiction are the most popular. The survey also shows that the majority of the book readers, TV has stimulated their reading habit.

Among the list of winter-reading books for the younger readers is "The Little Prince" by Antoine de Saint-Exupéry. "Mistaken" shows two modern titles are "The North Sea" and "The North Sea" by Astrid Lindgrén.

There is no fringe like a book. Take an extra day. Every day is a day of planning, working.

Housekeeping on the railway

Keeping a railway property up to scratch by year is a vital task for the railway. In 1939, "housekeeping" involved, among other things, the buying of 340 million of new and re-used material.

A dog's life

—Chempagne, 15 miles

Toronto—Two Toronto Housewives have found a dog's life can include a champagne diet and a 1400 calorie diet.

According to a complaint that 15-year-old "Champagne" had been fed a diet of champagne and 1400 calories.

There was an apparent taste for the four things of life. He professes to be a daily glass of champagne in his daily life.

Society general manager George Hume said the owner, whom he declined to identify, was being informed of the society's disapproval of the liquid diet and daily bath.

"There's certainly no crassly in it," he said. "It's just that it's a poor dog management policy."

The inspectors were somewhat excited of "Champagne" because of his "four things of life" diet.
